

How to Get the Most Benefit from Counseling

You have decided that what you have going on in your life is big enough or difficult enough to seek help. Great first step. This takes initiative, courage and strength. Now the hard work begins as you dig in and proactively take charge of your life.

Counseling generally occurs on a weekly or bi-weekly basis for 50 minutes. That leaves approximately 6,670 waking minutes a week for you to intervene in your own life with the help, support, suggestions, ideas, etc. that you receive in your counseling sessions. That means you are the single most powerful, influential and available source of change and growth in your life. When you are stuck or overwhelmed or overburdened however, a counselor can lend just enough encouragement, support and help to get you through to make use of your own power for your own good.

Here are some suggestions to get you moving along in the right direction and to make the 50 minute session carry forward.

1. Keep an open mind and heart in session
2. Journal outside of session
3. Take notes in session if you hear or talk about something you want to think about more or follow up on
4. If you receive an assignment from your therapist, be sure to do it, or journal what self talk, thoughts and feelings are causing you to be hesitant or avoidant about doing it
5. Be willing to take risks
6. Be willing to step outside of your comfort zone
7. Be willing to experiment with vulnerability
8. Keep your appointments
9. Show up on time for appointments
10. If you want to avoid coming to session, realize this is probably an indicator that important work is being in your done in your life, it's just uncomfortable, feel the fear and dive in! KEEP YOUR APPOINTMENT
11. Use session time wisely, follow your therapist's cues on this
12. Realize that as counseling begins and in the early stages, things may start to feel worse before they get better as you dig into life and expose stuff you have been keeping buried or at bay
13. Get adequate sleep
14. Get adequate and balanced nutrition
15. Drink enough water
16. Get some exercise (walking and stretching are easy and free)
17. Stay in touch with the people who love and support you
18. Breathe deeply
19. Realize you can stop counseling any time you wish
20. Finish well, in other words, have a conversation with your therapist about finishing rather than just disappearing

Policies

The Limits of Confidentiality

Counselors recognize that trust is a cornerstone of the counseling relationship. Counselors aspire to earn the trust of clients by creating an ongoing partnership, establishing and upholding appropriate boundaries, and maintaining confidentiality. Several situations require professional counselors to disclose confidential client information:

Abuse – if we have reason to believe that a minor child, elderly person, or person with a disability has been abused, abandoned, or neglected, Enrichment must report this concern or observation to the appropriate authorities.

Health Oversight Activities – If the Texas Board of Professional Examiners of Professional Counselors is investigating a clinician that you have filed a formal complaint against, Enrichment may be required to disclose protected health information regarding your case.

Professional Harm – If you disclose sexual contact with another mental health professional with whom you have had a professional relationship, Enrichment is required to report this violation to the licensing board. You have the right to anonymity in the filing of this report.

Judicial and Administrative Proceedings as Required – If you are involved in a court proceeding and a court subpoenas information about the professional services provided you and/or the records thereof, Enrichment may be compelled to provide the information. Enrichment will not release your information without attempting to notify you or your legally appointed representative.

Serious Threat to Health or Safety – If you communicate to your therapist an explicit threat of imminent serious physical harm to yourself or others and I believe you may act on this threat, we have a legal duty to take the appropriate measures, including disclosing information to the police. In both cases, we will disclose only what we believe is the minimal amount of information necessary.

FEES

The fee for each counseling session (approximately 50 minutes) is $120, payable at the time of each appointment unless other arrangements are made as outlined below. You may pay by cash, check, credit or debit. There is a $30 fee for all checks returned for nonpayment. If there are two instances of returned checks, all future payments must be paid with cash or by credit or debit. It is the policy of Enrichment to evaluate fees annually in January. Fees are subject to increase at this time. You will have a one month notice if your fee will be adjusted.

INSURANCE

You are ultimately responsible for your fee, your health insurance may pay a portion of the fee. It is your responsibility to file with insurance. I can provide you with receipts for paid sessions at your request.

APPOINTMENTS, CANCELLATIONS AND NO-SHOWS

At the conclusion of your initial interview you and your therapist will agree to a schedule for additional appointments. Because consistency is an important part of the counseling process, the appointment time you schedule is reserved for you and is not available to anyone else.

If you are unable to keep a scheduled appointment, you must notify your therapist a minimum of 48 hours in advance (Monday 8:00 a.m. through Friday 5:00 p.m.). Monday cancellations must be made on the preceding Thursday to avoid having to pay for the canceled or missed appointment. Insurance will not pay for missed appointments, therefore, your liability for a missed appointment or late cancellation will be the entire fee you have contracted with your therapist. If there are two instances of missed or short notice (less than 48 hours) cancellations, all future appointments must be paid for at the time of scheduling. If you arrive late, your appointment will still end at the scheduled time.
